Do You Love Denman Trails and Trail Walks?

Submitted by Denman Trails Committee

The small but dedicated group of trail-maintaining volunteers needs your help!

Denman has a great and expanding network of trails for resident pedestrians, equestrians, cyclists, dog walkers, families, kids, and visitors. This network is a Denman treasure, but it does take work to keep it accessible.

The Denman Trails Committee meets once a month, and usually plans a work bee and a recreational hike (on or off island) for each month.

If you can help us, might want to help, please come to a Trails meeting and meet us. We meet at the Denman Firehall at 7:30 PM on the last Tuesday evening of each month.

travelling to the Caribbean. He was a strong and loving father figure to his sons in France – whom he always said were adorable. He taught himself the difficult second language of English and was recently also learning Spanish!

For most of his life, Paul has always wanted to see the beautiful West Coast of BC. He loved the untouched and expansive world of our nature here. He finally managed to come to our island as a Wwoof-er, first working with Veronica and Alan. He then worked for Nettie and it was apparent that they became life partners very quickly.

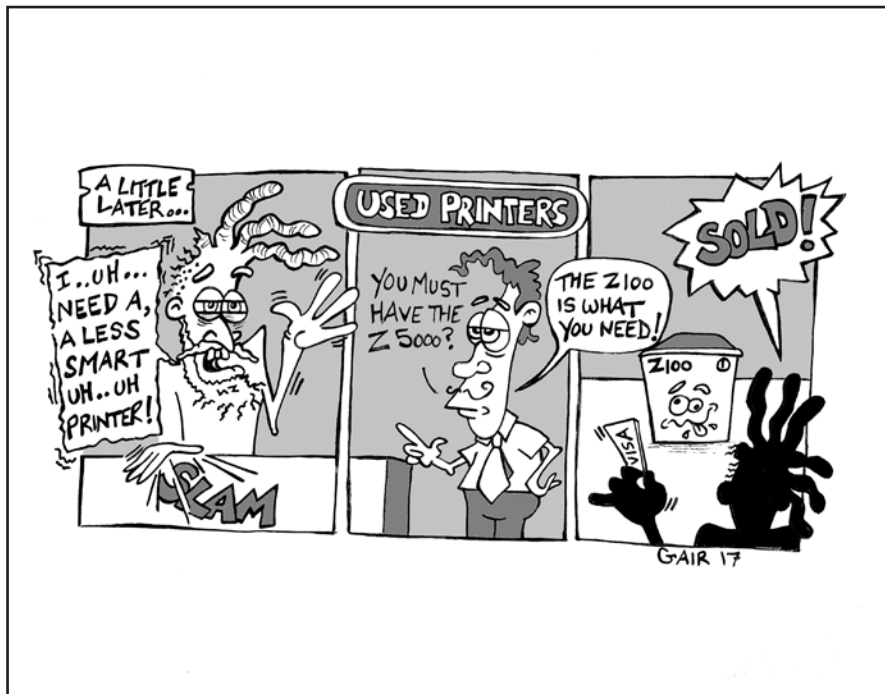

During their too-short relationship of three years, they travelled through western Canada, met many new friends, joined families from all over the world and created a new home next to Fillongley Park with the perfect walking trails for his sweet pet Scarlet. His artistry included sketching, painting, sculpting and recently found a love for creating outdoor furniture with driftwood and cedar.

Paul is survived by his loving family who live in France: Papa Armand, Maman Liliane, sisters Gisele and Annie and brother Bernard and niece and nephews, including Eva and Tomas who recently visited Denman Island. Paul was quickly embraced and equally loved by his new Canadian and Australian families: daughter Crystal and husband Jason, granddaughters Emma and Madeline; Nettie's brother John and wife Laurie; son Ralph and wife Sammi, grandchildren Grace and Fergus.

Thank you to all friends on Denman who expressed condolences and support to Nettie through this unexpected time. Thank you to those who could attend Paul's Forest Gathering held at his favorite place of serenity and peace. Paul's life will be remembered in good humor, with laughter... one of his most endearing qualities. Although his time here with Nettie on Denman was brief, it was amazing and we are forever grateful.

Singing and Guitar Lessons on Denman Island!

Submitted by Melisa Devost

Hello Denman Islanders, have you always wanted to strum and sing a couple tunes around the campfire? Have you been playing and singing for years and want to get to the next level? Do you have that child who is always singing along to everything and making up their own songs?

I am pleased to be offering singing and beginner guitar lessons (or a combination of both) Denman Island.

Lessons will be for kids 8 and up and adults of any age (it's never too late!)

I will be teaching in the music room at the Denman school on Wednesdays from 2:30pm – 6:30pm. Lessons can be half an hour or a full hour.

For rates, more information and to book lessons, please be in touch: melisadevost@gmail.com 250-335-2371

A little about me: Melisa Devost has worked as both a professional musician and music teacher for the past 12 years. She majored in guitar in the Jazz program at VIU, which she left to go on the road as a solo artist and to accompany some of Canada's best.

She has studied various different voice pedagogies including Speech Level Singing and Roy Hart work and completed her teacher training in Fitzmaurice Voicework® in Los Angeles in 2014. Melisa is continuously curious about voice both as a teacher and as a student, believing that all good teachers are perpetual students.

"Melisa Devost is a very focused and thoughtful voice teacher. She has a deep understanding of the physiology and mechanics of singing, which she combines with an engaging, fun and attentive teaching style" – Kim Barlow, singer/songwriter

Getting to Solar: The Path to Independence

Submitted by Anthony Gregson, Correspondent at Large

According to Wikipedia, "the amount of solar energy reaching the surface of the planet is so vast that in one year it is about twice as much as will ever be obtained from all of the Earth's non-renewable resources of coal, oil, natural gas, and mined uranium combined".

Given the historical example of Denman's can-do pioneer economy of self-reliance (not to mention the First Nations, who were totally self-reliant in every respect), grid-free independence is a deeply attractive ethos. But according to Sheldon Rempel, long time Denman resident, and passionate student of solar power, not to mention supplier of solar panels, getting to that dream is more demanding than you might expect.

... Getting to Solar

A solar power system consists of a collector array (solar panels), an inverter to convert the energy from DC to AC, and a battery to store the power. Some or all of that power can be fed into the Hydro grid.

Setting up a couple of panels and running a line into the grid is one thing; storing that solar energy so you can use it on demand is something else altogether. And storing enough energy to run all your appliances including an electric stove and hot water heater is a whole different order of magnitude. Then there are Denman's long rainy months which will require a serious financial commitment to ensure a sustainable supply of independent energy.

Going solar on a grid feed is not DIY. There is an application process with Hydro who will not issue a permit unless the installation is certified by a qualified solar electrician.

There is a great deal to think about and not a little technical complexity. A solar installation has to start with a solar energy inventory of all your appliances, their energy spikes, and your usage patterns. In effect your designing a system and like all systems, if you get the requirements wrong, you're not setting yourself up for success. Depending on where you want to place the panels, you have to think about how they will be located, orientation to the sun to compensate for the seasons, upgrade flexibility (to collect more energy if needed), and cleaning. Sheldon favours ground-based installation.

"Battery storage," Sheldon says, "is everything." The calculations to determine how much energy will be lost in transmission from panels and delivered over time are complex. Losses can be significant – up to 80%. Batteries can weigh hundreds of pounds and costs $400 to $500. If not properly maintained, batteries can lose their charge memory. To hold enough power to manage all appliances, you will need a bank of batteries which would require a significant financial commitment. But then again, if you live far off the grid, the cost of fully self-sufficient solar might be comparable to the cost of all the telephone poles Hydro would otherwise require.

Surprisingly, if you are feeding into the grid, generating your own solar will not be a backup in case of a major disruption because Hydro will shut all feeds down for safety reasons in the event of repair.

Sheldon believes that the most practical solar power option for individual Denman residents is a grid tie that would keep your usage to a tier one Hydro level using what's available to achieve some degree of independence. Moving to gas for high-energy usage appliances such as the stove, and drawing on solar for the computer, lights and low demand appliances would certainly take you closer to getting off the grid.

It all depends how you live. The contemporary Walden option - LED lights, wood stoves, and a simple (but not necessarily effortless) way of living - would certainly reduce the energy footprint. But how well will this work for an aging Island population 22 years above the provincial average?

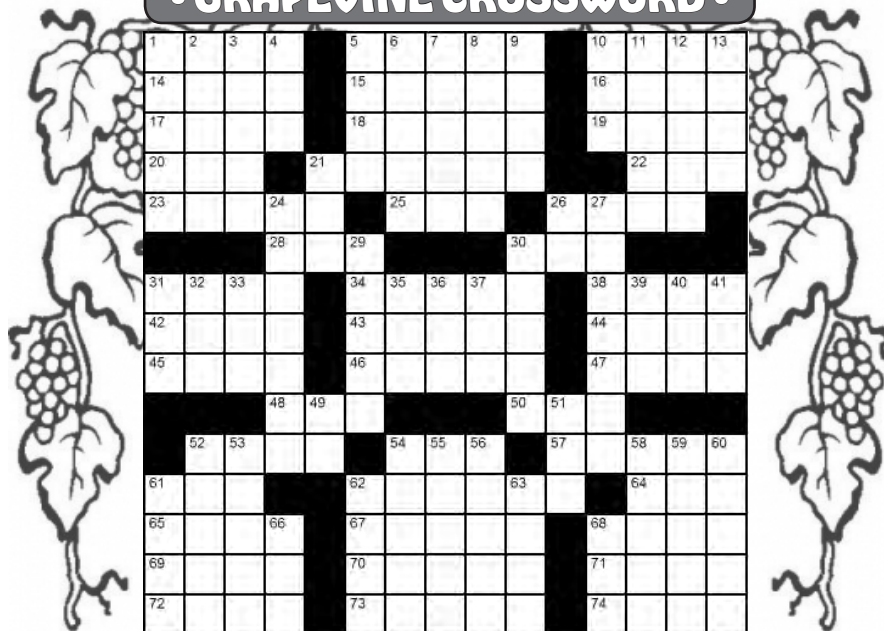

Denman enjoys an abundant supply of clean power through Hydro which goes a long way to meeting fundamental goals of sustainability, and if it is not as cheap as we might like, Hydro has structured its rates to encourage energy conservation. Even so, Sheldon believes that the real driver of solar on Denman is a strong desire for an altruistic independence. "Independence is safety because you have control over your life, and don't have to live with issues like the Site C Dam. And a lot of people want solar because it just seems the right thing to do."

He points out that there are consultants who work with communities to set up power generation cooperatives. Denman is an ideal candidate because it is self-contained. Sheldon believes that a green energy cooperative, reliant on solar, with investment
