BREXIT REFERENDUMS: BEST TWO OUT OF THREE? OP/ED

By Gwynne Dyer • Originally published December 4, 2018

The five-day debate in the British parliament on Prime Minister Theresa May's Brexit deal with the European Union did not start well for her. Everybody knows that she hasn't got the votes to pass the deal, but it turned out that she hasn't got the votes for lots of other things either.

It's a rotten deal because it was bound to be. The EU is 27 other countries with a population seven times that of the United Kingdom, so it was always going to have the upper hand in negotiations. It played hardball in the talks because it needed to demonstrate that Britain would be worse off by leaving. Otherwise other members might also decide they could 'cherry-pick' the bits of the EU they liked and skip the rest.

So the EU countries stuck together, and May's government was forced to choose between a 'no-deal' Brexit that would cause chaos in the UK and the lousy deal that the EU offered her instead. In a moment of sanity, she chose the latter.

The deal leaves Britain still part of the common market the Brexiters wanted to quit and still paying into the EU budget, but no longer with any voice in the EU's decisions. Moreover, Britain can only exit that halfway house with the consent of the EU.

That consent will only be forthcoming if May can somehow find a way to keep the border between Northern Ireland (a part of the UK) and the Republic of Ireland (which will remain an EU member) 'invisible'. Until then, Britain must stay in the customs union.

End the customs union and the inter-Irish border becomes a real barrier where customs duties are collected and illegal immigrants are stopped. But that would hinder the free passage of Irish people, which was the heart of the deal that stopped the killing in Ireland twenty years ago. The 'Troubles' would return – or at least that's what people fear, including the Irish prime minister, Leo Varadkar, who effectively has a veto on EU policy on this issue.

So May's deal leaves the UK half-in and half-out of the EU, "shackled to a radiator" until such time as it comes up with a magical solution to that border conundrum. In fact, there is none: the Good Friday agreement that ended the war in Ireland assumed that both the UK and the Irish Republic would remain EU members, and it cannot survive a full rupture of that relationship.

May's deal was therefore never going to make it through parliament. Those who don't want Brexit (at least half the members of the House of Commons) will vote against it, but so will the real Brexiters, who see it as a betrayal of their fantasy. And if party discipline is going to collapse anyway, then you might as well vote for what you actually want.

May lost three votes in parliament on Monday, which gravely undermined the authority of her government. The most important was one that took away her freedom to decide what to do next if (or rather when) her deal is voted down. Now, PARLIAMENT decides what to do next – and it could choose a number of courses, including a second referendum on Brexit.

The second referendum has become the unicorn of British politics, a fabled beast that never shows up in real life, but there are unicorn droppings all over the Houses of Parliament this week. As the fantasies fade and reality bites, the members of House of Commons (of whom a majority always supported 'Remain', even if many hid their views in order to survive politically) have become an extraordinarily volatile group.

There are half a dozen possible outcomes to the parliamentary manoeuvring of this week, ending with the decisive vote on May's deal next Tuesday, but several of them would probably lead to a second referendum that might reverse the Brexit vote of June, 2016. And the European Court of Justice's advocate-general has just ruled that the UK could, if it wishes, just drop its application to leave without needing the permission of other EU members.

It would be a remarkable result: three years of huffing and puffing about 'sovereignty', followed by a meek resumption of Britain's (quite advantageous) position in the EU. Of course, the angry Leavers would cry 'Foul!' and demand yet another referendum – 'Best of Three' – or they could just take to the streets.

There are frequent veiled threats in the right-wing press that any thwarting of the Brexit dream by a second referendum could result in blood in the streets. That may be so, although it's more likely to be another of those 'Project Fear' campaigns that have disfigured the entire Brexit process.

In any case, if it should ever come to street-fighting, the Remainers would win easily. They are, on average, thirteen years younger than the Brexiters. 🍷

KING TIDE PHOTOS DECEMBER 2018 COMM NOTES

By Jenny Balke

Send in your King Tide Photos – with Site, Date & Time to dikingtides@gmail

Photographing the shoreline at very high tides helps to track the creeping rise of sea levels with climate change. Even more important, seeing our beaches at high tides increases our awareness of what's happening out there at our 'edge'!

So, this December's high tides are numerous. Please pick a date and take a pic...

Upcoming tides predicted over 5m or 16.4 ft (in daylight):

- Dec 10 8:28 am
- Dec 11 9:05 am
- HIGHEST over 17 ft:
- Dec 25 8:23 am
- Dec 26 9:08 am
- Dec 27 9:52 am
- Dec 28 10:36 am
- Dec 29 11:20 am
- Dec 30 12:04 noonish
- Dec 31 12:48 pm

And there will be more high tides later in January 2019. We will collect photos until the end of January and produce another report of Denman shorelines at these extreme high tides! High tide DI shoreline photos from any date in Dec-Jan will be included.

Just a couple of notes on tides and shorelines.

Tides are complex changeable things! Gravity, sun and moon orbits, their perigees, aggressive storm surges etc... Just when you thought you understood what a King Tide was, someone more knowledgeable tells you something else. Recently John pointed out that daily atmospheric pressure also affects the actual height of the "high" tide! So all these things need to be considered! Tidal predictions for Comox can be found by Googling: 'King tides Comox' and choosing 'Comox (#7965) 7 days Tidal Predictions' by the Department of Fisheries and Oceans.

The Denman shoreline is also not rock solid! The majority of our shoreline is eroding dramatically. Denman backshores are largely sedimentary, from the sandy, silty Komox sands, to the compressed shale of Baynes Sound and even bits of the alternating beds of sandstone and conglomerate. Every year more and more of Denman Island is wearing away and drifting into and along the intertidal foreshore. Cliffs are collapsing; trees are falling into the ocean; some of Lacon Road is literally "on the edge". Foreshore deposition between Denman and Tree Island is remarkable: we can walk to Tree at ever higher tides. 🌺

MCLACHLIN, MCLEOD, CHARIANDY, DEERCHILD, O'NEILL, WONG & VERMETTE COMM NOTES

By Stewart Goodings

Sounds like the latest law firm, doesn't it? But no, it's actually a partial list of the renowned authors who will be coming to the Denman Readers and Writers Festival next July.

Savour these names: Beverley Mc-

Lachlin, first woman Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, and now a first time crime thriller novelist; Andrew McLeod, The Tyee's legislative bureau chief; David Charriandy, highly regarded novelist and SFU writing teacher; Rosanna Deerchild, CBC Radio host of "Unreserved";

Heather O'Neill, Montreal-based writer of several award-winning novels; Lindsay Wong, up and coming Vancouver writer; and Katharina Vermette, Metis author of both poetry and fiction.

While our line-up should be complete early in the new year, the Festival committee is pretty pleased to have assembled these six authors, all of whom will be making their first visit to the island.

In alphabetical order, here is some additional information about these six authors: David Chariandy has written three books: two powerful novels, "Soucouyant", and "Brother", and a dramatic prose letter to his daughter, entitled "I've Been Meaning to Tell You" about discrimination and life. His novels portray the issues faced by Caribbean immigrants to Canada.

Rosanna Deerchild has been a CBC broadcaster for 20 years and her radio program "Unreserved" dives straight into Indigenous Canada and introduces you to storytellers, culture makers and community shakers from across the country. Her acclaimed book of poems is "This is a Small Northern Town", and her memoir "Calling Down the Sky" chronicles the devastating impact of Residential Schools.

Beverley McLachlin has had a long and storied career as a lawyer and judge in both BC and Ottawa, culminating in 17 years on the Supreme Court of Canada as Chief Justice. Having recently retired from the Bench, she has published a legal thriller, "Full Disclosure", an instant national best seller that critics have described as gripping, intricate and full of heart.

Andrew McLeod is a well known political journalist with The Tyee, and previously Victoria's alternative weekly Monday Magazine. His two books deal with vital public policy issues: "All Together Healthy: A Canadian Wellness Revolution", and "A Better Place on Earth: The Search for Fairness in Super Unequal British Columbia".

Heather O'Neill comes from Montreal and her novels, "Lullabies for Little Criminals", "The Girl Who was Saturday", and "The Lonely Hearts Hotel" offer quirky and memorable characters from that city's underbelly. She has also written about her relationship with her somewhat less than law-abiding father in a humorous and thoughtful essay "Wisdom Nonsense—Invaluable Lessons From My Father."

Katharena Vermette hails from Manitoba, and writes from her Metis background. Her book of poems, "North End Love Songs" won the Governor General's Award for Poetry, while her novel, "The Break" is a heart-rending story of life for an extended Metis family in Winnipeg.

This book won the Amazon Best First Novel Award.

Lindsay Wong is a young Vancouver writer whose recent novel, "The Woo Woo: How I Survived Ice Hockey, Drug-Raids, Demons, and My Crazy Chinese Family" has won both critical and popular praise, depicting as it does the humour as well as the difficulties of growing up as a Chinese Canadian in BC. She is also writer in residence at the Community Arts Council in Vancouver.

These are talented writers, all with fascinating life stories. Read their books in the coming months, and get ready to meet them next July. 🍷

DECEMBER RECIPE: ACUPRESSURE FOR SCIATICA PAIN

By Kyla Plaxton

1 Point each week = 1 Recipe for the month

1/4 - Bladder 47

This point is found directly over the kidneys. It's very influential pressure point for the whole lower back. Lots of 'Qi' can get stuck here or become depleted from over work, too much caffeine and not enough water.

FIND: At the indent of muscle, below ribcage on the back.

HOW: Press inward toward spine. Hold for 3 LONG & SLOW Deep Breaths. Release Gently. 🍷

EDITORIAL POLICY

The Grapevine is dedicated to fostering a sense of community on Denman and Hornby by covering events, issues, and the creativity of the many gifted people amongst us. The following is our policy on content:

- Profiles of individuals, history, reviews and op ed are published free of charge.
- Literary content including poetry, stories, belle lettres is published free of charge.
- Promotional content for products, services, programs, and events will be published at going advertising rates.
- Public service announcements, notices of meetings, and news releases will be published for a fee. Exceptions will be made for emergencies where the public is immediately endangered.
- With regret, no exceptions can be made for non-profit status.

Please keep in mind that Hornby and Denman are a very small market for newspaper publication. We do our best to provide quality content at no cost to our readers but we ask you to understand that this depends on financial viability. Paper, ink, postage, equipment, and rent all add up. As it is, the Grapevine can only be brought to you with considerable subsidy of time and energy by our team which is very willingly given. The Grapevine would like to accept more content free of charge, particularly around community news, and is working on plans to expand its reach and revenue base to move towards that goal.
